International Register and Checklist of Cultivar names in the Genus Syringa L. (Oleaceae)

("Work-in-Progress" Lilac Register)

For information on title, copyright, address, table of content, acknowledgements, historical overview, and introduction see Introductory Pages.

RELEASE NOTE: This release includes updates to the main Register PDF file and is the first update since the September 22, 2024, update. This update has 9 new Japanese cultivars from Ihara, 16 from the Russia Lilac Group, a couple of Klager additions, a rare revision to a Lemoine cultivar name, and revisions to the information on many Kazakhstani, Ukrainian, Russian, and American cultivars.

It was decided to de-list specific internet reference pages and refer only to the site by name, since the reference pages change, move, or disappear frequently.

It was decided to eliminate multiple literature references after the first one establishing a name has been listed.

A Word file with track changes enabled showing changes from the last release is available upon request from the Registrar. Publicly posted releases are in locked PDF format but are available for copy and print; an unlocked PDF is available on request by recognized institutions and collectors. A custom Excel file developed by the ILS and suitable for sorting is available to its members on its website.

Introductory notes concerning the entries in the Register and Checklist.

The Register and Checklist contains all cultivar names known to the Registrar, and many designations that may be interpreted erroneously as being cultivar names.

The name of a cultivar or Group consists of the name of the genus or lower taxonomic unit to which it is assigned together with a cultivar or Group epithet. The name may be written in a variety of equivalent ways (ICNCP-2016, Article 8.1)[1]. Syringa 'Excel', Syringa

[1] The International Code of Nomenclature for Cultivated Plants, 9th edition 2016 may be electronically downloaded from http://www.ishs.org/scripta-horticulturae/international-code-nomenclature-cultivated-plants-ninth-edition

×hyacinthmakiflora 'Excel', lilac 'Excel', sering 'Excel' (in Dutch), lilas 'Excel' (in French), and Flieder 'Excel' (in German) are names for the same cultivar.

A trade designation is not a name but is a device that is usually used for marketing a cultivar or Group in place of its accepted name when the accepted name is not considered suitable for marketing purposes (ICNCP-2016, Article 13). Trade designations, including trademarks, appear in small capital letters (e.g., LUDWIG SPAETH). Trade designations, including trademarks, must be distinguished typographically with no quotes and are always to be cited together with, or in juxtaposition to, the accepted name (ICNCP-2016, Article 17) (e.g., Syringa LUDWIG SPAETH ['Andenken an Ludwig Späth'], or TINKERBELLE™ ['Bailbelle']).

Diacritical marks are an integral part of certain languages such as French, German, Latvian and Swedish, where they affect pronunciation. Neglecting umlauts is simply an orthographic error and changes the pronunciation of a name or word; neglecting diacritical marks is unnecessary and awkward, although sometimes convenient for an English keyboard.

Cultivar names originally published in Cyrillic script have been transliterated. In accordance with Article 33 of the International Code of Nomenclature for Cultivated Plants-2016 transliterations in this publication are based on the 1997 edition, 2012 revision, of the ALA-LC Romanization Tables[2]. Certain Cyrillic characters are transliterated to English by using two or more Latin characters, such as я = ya; ю = yu; ш = sh; ч = ch, and so on. Whenever this is the case the Latin characters have been underlined. For example, the Latin ya will transliterate to the Cyrillic я, rather than to the individual characters ы and a. The Latin transliteration of the Cyrillic character щ is underlined twice: shch, distinguishing it from ш = sh and ч = ch appearing side by side. This convention has been adopted from Charles Dragutin Holetich, Lilacs - Special Issue 11(2):1, International Lilac Society; 1982.

Each entry in the Register follows this pattern

1st line:

Cultivar epithet followed by Group epithet if applicable and/or taxonomic unit.

Registered cultivar epithets appear in bold type (e.g., 'Michel Buchner'); non-registered epithets appear in normal type (e.g. 'Prairie Gem'). Since the initiation of the Register, only the established cultivar names in North America as of the 1953 Wister census were considered automatically Registered and in bold type. As of October 2023, a similar standard has now been applied to all established cultivar names from the entire world.

Cultivar names originally published in Cyrillic, Chinese, Korean, and Japanese have been transliterated (Romanized) or appear in pinyin. New registrations are currently being published in the RHS Cultivar Registration Bulletin at:
https://fliphtml5.com/bookcase/hyezs

Group names appear in round brackets (Villosae Group). This is the only Group name established, accepted and registered in the genus Syringa. For the definition of Villosae Group see Appendix F, summary of classification, Series Villosae.

Botanical names, here referred to as the "lower taxonomic unit", appear in italics. This may vary from simply S. (for Syringa), to S. vulgaris (genus and species), S. oblata subsp. dilatata (genus, species and subspecies), S. vulgaris var. purpurea (genus, species and botanical variety), and S. ×hyacinthiflora (named interspecific hybrid or nothospecies).

Cultivar names originally published in Cyrillic, Chinese, Korean, or Japanese script have been recorded on an additional line (first added April 12, 2016).

2nd and 3rd lines:

(May be preceded by the original language name). Originator and year followed by the 1953 Wister Color Code (for explanations see below). The color is usually chosen by the originator and may not be accurate. About 10% of colors include two or more colors. No bud colors are yet included in the Wister code line but are in the third color line.
Nota bene: The "year" is not always a reliable date; revisions are frequent, depending on information available.

The third line reflects additional inflorescence color information. This was obtained from digital extraction of a representative photograph for all cultivars in the 2020 ILS Photo & Color Database and is subject to the limitations of digital photographs and pixel extraction. Revisions are expected to occur and suggestions with documentation are welcome. Please note soil pH influences floral color which can differ from the description given by the hybridizer or Registry. Blue is more pronounced in alkaline soil while violet and purple are more pronounced in acidic soil.

RGB refers to the Red-Green-Blue digital colors of a computer monitor. RHS refers to the Royal Horticultural Society's Colour Chart, Sixth Edition (2015). These are either assigned by the originator or derived from the RGB information. LCS refers to the Lilac Color System of DeBard, published in the ILS journal LILACS, Volume 48, Number 2 (Spring 2019), pp. 72-87. These are derived from the RGB information and assigned by the Registrar. It is in the following format:

1. RGB flower code with associated background color.
2. RGB bud code with associated background color.
3. RHS flower code.
4. RHS bud code.
5. LCS flower code.
6. LCS bud code.

Example:

163,156,197	202,143,181	N88D	77C	IX	XI

OR:

RGB flower	RGB bud	RHS flower	RHS bud	LCS flower	LCS bud

Subsequent lines may provide information on:

- parentage: { × }
- synonymy: syn. - (more accurately, any other designations used for this cultivar).
- literature citations
- photo on Jorgovani/Lilacs 2015 DVD - this notation indicates that one or more photographs of the cultivar can be found on the DVD, second, revised and expanded edition, compiled by Želimir Borzan and Charles Holetich.

Disclaimer: The identity of the cultivars photographed may or may not have been confirmed.

- name: Notation on etymology, derivation or meaning of the cultivar name.
- awards: notation on awards received (RHS = Royal Horticultural Society, UK; KMTP = Royal Society of Horticulture and Botany, NL.)
- notation on establishment, acceptance and registration of the cultivar name.
- notation if it is known as a lilac for forcing.

'Daphne', S. vulgaris

origin not known; ? ?
Anon., Lilacs - Proceedings 17(1):26 [1988] - name only, listed as growing at Grape Hill Gardens (Wm. Utley; now defunct), probably a misidentification.
Cultivar name not established; probably no longer in cultivation.

Daphne - see 'Daphne Pink'

Nota bene: The notation "Daphne (syn. of S. microphylla superba)" appeared in Wister, Arnoldia 23(4):80 [1963] as a new registration; it is now believed that this is an erroneous entry. Vrugtman, HortScience 31(3):328 [1996]. Similarly labeled specimen in cultivation at Duniway Park, Portland, Oregon USA and planted in 1985.

'Daphne Pink', S. ×hyacinthiflora

Skinner 1959; S V

206,172,210	180,118,148	84C	186C	IX	XI

F2 hybrid of S. vulgaris × S. oblata dilatata
syn. - 'Daphne'
Skinner, Dropmore, Cat., 11 [1959] - as 'Daphne'; in lit. F.L. Skinner to D. Wyman, 28 Dec. 1964 - name changed to 'Daphne Pink' in compliance with the ICNCP; Wister, Registrations 1965 [mimeographed], p. 4 - as 'Daphne Pink', "name not approved"; Skinner, Hort. Horizons, 49, 109, Pl. 29 [1966] - as 'Daphne Pink'; Skinner, Dropmore, Cat., 11 [1968] - as 'Daphne Pink'; Photo on Jorgovani/Lilacs 2015 DVD.

{mutation of S. vulgaris; no cultivar name provided}
Hauck, US Plant Patent No. 2614 [Mar. 22, 1966] - as purple-mauve, S or D not given; Wister & Oppe, Arnoldia 31(3):122 [1971] - name only; Rogers, Tent. Int. Reg. genus Syringa [1976] - as S VI; Vrugtman, AABGA Bull. 15(3):72 [1981] - correction to S III *; in lit. Jeff Payne to Mark DeBard (30 June 2017) S III * confirmed; DeBard & Vrugtman, Lilacs - Quart. Jour. 47(1):33-37 [2018], see Nota bene; Photos on Jorgovani/Lilacs 2015 DVD, show florets to be D, the photos appear to be of ‘Aucubaefolia’ (FV 1 July 2017).
Cultivar name registered 1970; name established and accepted.
*Nota bene: We believe that all plants marketed in the past and at present as ‘Dappled Dawn’ which are double blues, are in fact ‘Aucubaefolia’. It is also likely that such plants which have single light blue florets are not ‘Dappled Dawn’ (which has single dark blue florets). Last proven plant died in Cincinnati, Ohio in 2020.

Preston, Isabella, breeder's designations and cultivar names

Note: Much Preston information came from her handwritten notes done by her about 1940-1943, obtained by the Registrar from Richard Hinchcliff, who got them from the "Preston Papers" at RBG-Burlington in 2012.

Note: Numbering system: first 2 numbers are the year of seedling. Second two numbers are a cohort, third two numbers are a specific seedling. 20.14 (270 seedlings) and 20.15 (29 seedlings) have S. villosa as the female seed parent and S. reflexa as male pollen parent. 20.03.01 is the only cultivar with S. villosa as male pollen parent and S. reflexa as female seed parent.
